Business Technology Consulting

McKinsey & Company

McKinsey & Company is a global consulting firm advising the top management of leading companies and institutions on issues of strategy, organization, operations, and technology. We have more than 80 offices in all major cities around the world. Technology is increasingly a priority item on the top-management agendas of many companies. Hence, fluency in technology will be one of the hallmarks of the next generation of top business leaders. Our clients turn to us for objective advice on using technology to achieve their strategic business goals. To meet this growing need, McKinsey established the Business Technology Office in 1997. Since then, we have set up offices in 47 cities, in 23 countries, covering North and South America, Europe and Asia, with more than 650 consultants.

Offer

Our consultants work in teams on various projects or assignments, alongside consultants from other offices. They contribute a strong business-based understanding of IT to McKinsey's client service, and they have impact on some of the toughest, most exciting technology challenges in business today. Examples of typical projects include aligning a company's IT strategy to a new business strategy or even shaping business strategy by the use of IT; conceiving and planning IT architecture; restructuring an IT organization; and revamping the IT management by optimizing performance management or outsourcing.

Our consultants work daily with managers from all levels of the client organization. The effectiveness of our teams is measured by its business impact, not simply by the completion of a project.

Serving on both technology-related and general consulting engagements, McKinsey's Business Technology consultants grow to be CEO counselors fluent in one of the most important strategic levers of today and tomorrow.
